

As individual offerings, The Project Office and N-Compass are well established project management consultancies successfully operating in a range of sectors across New Zealand. The alignment of our values, vision and approach to work has created a solid foundation for the merger of our businesses.

Together, we believe we can create an even stronger proposition offering combined expertise, experience and networks that bring enhanced scale, skill and passion to existing and future projects.

N-Compass will now trade as a branch of The Project Office until we unite our businesses under a single brand. We look forward to sharing these changes with you over the next six months as our partnership evolves.

We believe this is an exciting opportunity to create a brave new world built on strong values, authentic relationships, and a fresh approach to project partnership in New Zealand.
